

Eastman House
Oxford, England
5. ii. 34.

What's the big idea, Bill? First you expose your bleeding heart to me, and now to Max Lowenthal. It is of course very generous of you, with everybody agin them at present, for you to champion the cause of "the Street" and persecuted houses like J.P. Morgan and Kuhn, Loeb. But if you are going to do it, you ought to bring your head and heart into alignment. I know little about the new psychology, but I'm sure that it must confirm the wisdom of the old that if the heart pulls in one direction and the head in another, unhappiness to the single owner of the two organs is bound to follow.

With warm regards,

Always yours,

F.F.

Professor William O. Douglas